

Today's passage from Luke 24:25-32, offers a glimpse of Jesus and his disciples after that first Easter. The story begins with two of Jesus' followers on the road between Jerusalem and Emmaus and demonstrates that belief in Jesus as risen Lord was not self-evident to his earliest followers, even after his crucifixion and resurrection. The reason why people back then came to believe in him was that he appeared to them. In other words, it took divine revelation for them to believe....and it was true for the men who travelled on the road to Emmaus.
